GOVERNOR

Defending Traditional Marriage and Religious Freedom

Marriage between one man and one woman is a divine gift from God meant to be protected. I believe the strength of our community, our state, and our nation begins with strong families. I believe that policy decisions regarding marriage are best left to the states and not the federal government. I vigorously oppose the Supreme Court's Obergefell decision that took away state sovereignty on the issue of marriage, and will continue to fight for Idaho's right to define marriage.

Religious liberty is a God given right held by all Americans. As a lifelong Christian and active member of the LDS faith, I consider my religious beliefs sacred and speak of them reverently. Next to defending life and standing up for marriage, there's nothing more important than defending our religious freedom. That's why I've sponsored the First Amendment Defense Act, which protects your right to worship however you choose without the fear of government coercion. The bill prohibits the federal government from taking an adverse action against a person on the basis that such person acts in accordance with a religious belief. My legislation and stalwart public defense of religious freedom has earned me perfect ratings from the Christian Coalition of America and Catholic Advocate. As governor, I'll fight activist judges and heavy-handed bureaucrats who want to trample the 1st Amendment and impose their secular beliefs and values on Idaho.

As governor, you can count on my unwavering defense of the sanctity of marriage and religious freedom to continue.
