GOVERNOR

Strengthening Rural Idaho

Idahoans in rural communities thrive when government gets out of the way. Idahoans are a strong, proud, hard working people who want to pass these traits on to their children. That's why I've fought to empower Idahoans by sponsoring legislation like the Future Logging Careers Act which encourages families to work together in their small businesses. I have also sponsored the Self-Sufficient Community Lands Act, which empowers local stakeholders to manage tracts of federal forests under Idaho state management practices.

The only thing Idahoans have ever asked for is freedom and an opportunity to work hard. As Governor, I want to foster an environment where we can create great jobs in rural Idaho by cutting taxes, getting rid of oppressive regulations, and unleashing educational opportunities for students in every corner of the state.
